MOUNT PLEASANT, S.C.— Patriots Point Development Authority announces the passing of former agency head and distinguished veteran Rear Adm. James H. Flatley III. Flatley, 91, a longtime Mount Pleasant resident and recipient of South Carolina's highest civilian honor, the Order of the Palmetto, passed away Friday, Dec. 12.

Flatley served as executive director of the Patriots Point Development Authority from 1994 to 2001. He is credited with helping lay the foundation for Patriots Point's long-term growth, vision and public mission. Following his service with the state of South Carolina, he later helped establish the USS Yorktown Foundation to support the Naval & Maritime Museum and its historic vessels, including the USS Yorktown and USS Laffey.

"We are deeply saddened by the news of Rear Admiral Flatley's passing," said Zeb Williams, a member of the Patriots Point Development Authority Board. "Admiral Flatley leaves an extraordinary legacy of service and leadership. Our thoughts are with his family and with all who had the privilege of serving alongside him."

Flatley was a graduate of the United States Naval Academy and served as a U.S. Naval aviator from 1956 to 1987. During his military career, he earned numerous decorations, including the Distinguished Flying Cross. In November 1963, he became the first pilot to successfully land a C-130 Hercules cargo aircraft on an aircraft carrier.

The Flatley family has deep ties to Navy aviation and the USS Yorktown (CV-10). Flatley's father, Rear Adm. James H. Flatley Jr., was a distinguished World War II pilot and served as the first air group commander aboard the USS Yorktown during the war. While serving in that role, he made the first landing on the USS Yorktown on May 6, 1943.

PATRIOTS POINT NAVAL & MARITIME MUSEUM
